Vanguard Global Corporate Bond Index Fund

Managed by Vanguard Global Advisers, LLC.

Investment Objective

The fund seeks to provide returns consistent with the performance of the Bloomberg Global Aggregate Float Adjusted Corporate Index Hedged, a market-weighted index of global corporate fixed income investments with maturities greater than 1 year.

Performance Summary

The Performance Summary does not form part of the Financial Statements.

- For the six months ended 30 June 2024, concerns about the pace of inflation and the prospect of interest rate cuts were top of mind for investors.
- Although global stocks continued to rally into 2024, the enthusiasm for global bonds seen in late 2023 faded. Investors had anticipated that falling inflation would lead central banks to begin cutting interest rates. Instead, persistent strength in labour markets and consumer spending, along with slow or stalled progress on inflation in several key markets, delayed the expected timeline for rate cuts.
- In the final month of the period, the Bank of Canada and the European Central Bank felt inflation had subsided enough to begin cutting rates. Other central banks, including the Federal Reserve and the Bank of England, decided to wait.
- Global bonds returned -3.16% for the period, as measured by the Bloomberg Global Aggregate Bond Index in US dollars.
- The fund's benchmark, which is hedged to the US dollar, returned 0.30% for the six months ended 30 June. The fund's return was affected in part by swing pricing, an anti-dilution mechanism designed to protect existing investors in a fund from the costs incurred when other investors buy or sell units in that fund.
- By country, the United States, which has the largest weighting in the index, underperformed the index as a whole. Other index heavyweights including Italy, Spain and Australia outperformed.
- By sector, bonds issued by financial institutions fared better than those issued by industrial companies and utilities.
- From a credit-quality perspective, bonds on the bottom rung of the investment-grade ladder performed better than their higher-rated counterparts. By maturity, shorter-dated bonds held up best.

All returns cited in this commentary are based in US dollars.

All of the returns in this report represent past performance, which is not a guarantee of future results that may be achieved by the fund. For performance data current to the most recent month-end, which may be higher or lower than that cited, visit our website at <http://global.vanguard.com>. Note, too, that both investment returns and principal value can fluctuate widely, so an investor's shares, when sold, could be worth more or less than their original cost.

* The tracking difference between the fund return and the index return over a stated period of time can be attributed to a number of factors, including, without limitation, small differences in weightings, trading activity, swing pricing, transaction costs and differences in the valuation and withholding tax treatment between the fund and the index vendor.

Vanguard Global Credit Bond Fund

Managed by Vanguard Global Advisers, LLC.

Investment Objective

This fund seeks to provide a moderate and sustainable level of current income by investing in a diversified portfolio of global credit fixed income bonds.

Performance Summary

The Performance Summary does not form part of the Financial Statements. The fund is actively managed and seeks to invest as described in the prospectus. The following performance information shows how the fund's returns compare with those of the Bloomberg Global Aggregate Credit Index Hedged, a market index that has investment characteristics similar to those of the fund.

- For the six months ended 30 June 2024, concerns about the pace of inflation and the prospect of interest rate cuts were top of mind for investors.
- Although global stocks continued to rally into 2024, the enthusiasm for global bonds seen in late 2023 faded. Investors had anticipated that falling inflation would lead central banks to begin cutting interest rates. Instead, persistent strength in labour markets and consumer spending, along with slow or stalled progress on inflation in several key markets, delayed the expected timeline for rate cuts.
- In the final month of the period, the Bank of Canada and the European Central Bank felt inflation had subsided enough to begin cutting rates. Other central banks, including the Federal Reserve and the Bank of England, decided to wait.
- Global bonds returned -3.16% for the period, as measured by the Bloomberg Global Aggregate Bond Index in US dollars.
- For the six months, the fund outpaced the 0.23% return of its benchmark.
- A short position in Japan and long exposure to European periphery countries (Greece and Spain) contributed to relative performance.
- Higher credit exposure versus the benchmark added value, as did sector and security selection decisions across European investment-grade corporates, specifically financials.

Benchmark returns in the commentary above are in US dollars.

Vanguard Global Short-Term Bond Index Fund

Managed by Vanguard Global Advisers, LLC, and sub-managed by Vanguard Investments Australia Ltd.

Investment Objective

This fund seeks to provide returns consistent with the performance of the Bloomberg Global Aggregate Ex US MBS 1–5 Year Float Adjusted and Scaled Index, a market-weighted index of global government, government-related agency, corporate and securitised bonds, excluding US mortgage-backed securities, with maturities between 1 and 5 years.

Performance Summary

The Performance Summary does not form part of the Financial Statements.

- For the six months ended 30 June 2024, concerns about the pace of inflation and the prospect of interest rate cuts were top of mind for investors.
- Although global stocks continued to rally into 2024, the enthusiasm for global bonds seen in late 2023 faded. Investors had anticipated that falling inflation would lead central banks to begin cutting interest rates. Instead, persistent strength in labour markets and consumer spending, along with slow or stalled progress on inflation in several key markets, delayed the expected timeline for rate cuts.
- In the final month of the period, the Bank of Canada and the European Central Bank felt inflation had subsided enough to begin cutting rates. Other central banks, including the Federal Reserve and the Bank of England, decided to wait.
- Global bonds returned –3.16% for the period, as measured by the Bloomberg Global Aggregate Bond Index in US dollars.
- The fund's benchmark, which is hedged to the US dollar, returned 1.21% for the six months ended 30 June 2024.
- By country, the United States, which has the largest weighting in the index, underperformed the index as a whole. France, Belgium and Austria also underperformed. China, Sweden, Japan and Canada, on the other hand, outperformed.
- By sector, corporate bonds and those issued by financial institutions in particular fared better than some parts of the market, including government bonds.
- By credit quality, bonds toward the bottom of the investment-grade ladder fared better than their higher-rated counterparts.

All returns cited in this commentary are based in US dollars.

All of the returns in this report represent past performance, which is not a guarantee of future results that may be achieved by the fund. For performance data current to the most recent month-end, which may be higher or lower than that cited, visit our website at <http://global.vanguard.com>. Note, too, that both investment returns and principal value can fluctuate widely, so an investor's shares, when sold, could be worth more or less than their original cost.

* The tracking difference between the fund return and the index return over a stated period of time can be attributed to a number of factors, including, without limitation, small differences in weightings, trading activity, swing pricing, transaction costs and differences in the valuation and withholding tax treatment between the fund and the index vendor.
